Nearly 70 lakh people are dying every year due to pollution: Dr. Dhindsa

Sirsa 05 June 2023: An extension lecture was organized in the Education College Auditorium today on the occasion of World Environment Day at JCD Vidyapeeth. Principals, teaching staff and students of colleges of JCD Vidyapeeth were present on this occasion. On this occasion, the chief guest and key speaker was Professor Dr. Kuldip Singh Dhindsa, Director General of JCD Vidyapeeth and internationally renowned scientist.

Internationally renowned scientist and Director General of JCD Vidyapeeth, Dr. Kuldip Singh Dhindsa said that World Environment Day is celebrated every 5th June. This year too, this day is being celebrated on the theme 'End Plastic Pollution' under the United Nations Environment Programme. 150 countries are participating in it. He said that it is important for every person to save and protect his environment to sustain life on earth. The main causes of environmental change are population growth, urbanization, deforestation and economic development etc. Environmental pollution occurs due to water degradation, land degradation and air degradation. It affects the global climate and living conditions to a great extent. It has adverse psychological effects on humans, plants, animals and micro-organisms. An estimated 7 million people die each year from environmental pollution-related causes, most of which occur in the Asia-Pacific region.

Dr. Dhindsa said that plastic pollution has become a global crisis, threatening our ecosystems, wildlife and ultimately human health. Every year millions of tons of plastic waste end up in our oceans, rivers and landfills. He said that we have to accept our responsibility and collectively work towards a sustainable and plastic-free future because plastic takes hundreds of years to decompose and during this time it poses a serious threat to marine life and causes irreparable damage. By making changes in our daily lives and choosing better choices, we can reduce our plastic footprint to a great extent.

Dr. Kuldip Singh Dhindsa pointed out that global energy-related carbon dioxide emissions to combat climate change were approximately 36.44 billion metric tons in 2019, a significant increase from the pre-industrial era. However, projections for 2020 show a significant reduction in emissions due to the impacts of COVID-19. The Asia-Pacific region was the largest producer of carbon dioxide emissions in 2019. To reduce carbon dioxide production, many countries have begun issuing tradable green certificates. Carbon pricing is considered one of the most effective ways to incentivize corporations to emit less and encourage more sustainable production. Dr Dhindsa said the energy sector is one of the largest contributors to carbon dioxide emissions. Carbon dioxide is one of the primary gases emitted by the burning of fossil fuels. However, other emissions such as sulfur dioxide, nitrogen oxides and particulates may also be emitted, particularly through burning coal. New coal plants in Asia have also driven growth in energy-related emissions, he said. China is one of the largest emitters of energy-related emissions in the world. Despite the country's move toward renewable energy sources, coal-fueled electricity still dominates its energy market, which needs to be reduced.

CHANDRAYAAN-3 SUCCESS BY INDIAN ISRO SCIENTIST:

September 1, 2023, Dr. Kuldeep Singh Dhindsa, the Director General of JCD Vidyapeeth, Sirsa, and an internationally renowned scientist revealed that the Indian Space Research Organization (ISRO) had released a graph depicting temperature variations on the southern pole of the moon. The temperature at the surface of the moon was recorded at 50°C, while below the surface, it reached as low as -10°C.

According to ISRO, the Chandrayaan-3 mission's Vikram Lander conducted a Thermal-Physical Experiment (C.H.A.S.T.E.) payload to measure the thermal behavior of the moon's surface. At a depth of 8 cm below the surface, the temperature was recorded to be as low as -10°C. As one moves towards the surface, an increase in temperature can be observed. Above the surface, the graph showed relative stability in temperature between 50°C and 60°C.

In a statement released by ISRO, it was mentioned, "This is the first observation by C.H.A.S.T.E. payload on the Vikram Lander. It measures the temperature profile of the lunar upper regolith around the lunar pole to understand the thermal behavior of the lunar surface." According to Dr. B.H.M. Darukesh, a scientist at ISRO, "We all expected the temperature on the surface to be around 20°C, but this is significantly higher. The graph demonstrates variations in temperature between the lunar surface and near-surface. This is the first such profile for the southern pole of the moon. A detailed analysis is ongoing."

Dr. Darukesh further explained, "When we go 2-3 meters below the Earth's surface, we typically see a temperature difference of 2-3°C, but there, it's around 50°C. This is quite fascinating." The senior scientist noted that the temperature beneath the moon's surface drops to as low as 10°C below zero, resulting in a difference of 60°C from the surface to 10°C below zero. The country is proud of the great scientists who are the pillars of Chandrayaan-3's success. Dr. Dhindsa

Dr. Kuldeep Singh Dhindsa, Director General of Chaudhary Devi Lal Vidyapeeth, Sirsa, an internationally renowned scientist said that the contribution of many of our great scientists is behind the successful testing of Chandrayaan-3, including ISRO Chairman S. Somnath is considered an important person. Dr. Somnath served as the Director of the Vikram Sarabhai Space Center and the Center for Liquid Propulsion Systems, both centers dedicated to the development of rocket technologies for ISRO. Apart from Chandrayaan-3, other major missions being designed under Dr. Somnath's supervision are Aditya-L1 (to the Sun) and Gaganyaan (India's first manned space mission).

On the other hand, P. Veeramuthuvel became the director of Chandrayaan-3 project in the year 2019. According to Dr. Dhindsa, earlier he worked as Deputy Director in the Space Infrastructure Program Office of ISRO. He also played a key role in India's second moon mission Chandrayaan-2, which went out of control and crashed on the lunar surface. Dr. Kuldeep Singh Dhindsa, himself an international level scientist in Chemistry, said that P. Veeramuthuvel is an alumnus of the Indian Institute of Technology, Madras.

Geosynchronous Satellite Launch Vehicle (GSLV Mark-III, later renamed as Launch Vehicle Mark-III rocket), which carried the Chandrayaan-3 spacecraft (consisting of the propulsion module and the lander module with the rover inside it) It was developed by Vikram Sara Bhai Space Centre, Thumba. Center head S Krishna Nair and his team were involved in various key tasks of the important mission.

Dr Dhindsa further informed that M Shankaran assumed the role as Director of UR Rao Satellite Center in June 2021. Ultimately URSC built the Chandrayaan-3 spacecraft. Dr. Dhindsa said that the country is grateful to these scientists and their research team who, after years of tireless hard work, have brought the country to number one.
